

Our Holiday in Herefordshire

24th September to 1st October 2018

Now here's the start of a ripping good yarn
about our holiday at a Herefordshire barn.

Day One dawned –the excitement built,
every car packed to the hilt

We travelled in convoy to the Severn Bridge and all arrived without any hitch.

A Coffee and a chat before we departed,
all very happy and quite light-hearted

Then Tintern Abbey came into view,
an amazing sight – and lots to do
But ... we needed to eat and quench our thirst,
of course this really had to come first.

The next day to Hereford we wanted to be to see the Cathedral and the Mappa Mundi
And then onto .....but, wait, what's that over there?
It's a coffee shop we all declared.

Ledbury was our very next trip,
bordering on to the Malvern lip.
A town of beauty and much, much, more,
but ... cake and coffee before we explore!

We visited gardens and a dairy making cheese
and a tour of a cider factory, if you please,
and what was that we just passed?
A cafe with coffee? – oh at last!

We travelled the hills and down the dales
sometimes dipping in to Wales.
Daring deeds on the river too,
then for coffee and – where's the loo?

We saw giant butterflies and a great big bull
and of chicken and sheep we had our fill.
The black and white villages were just swell
and the cake and coffee went down well.

But then it was time to leave the barn
and all the residents on the farm.
The hens the sheep and a bull named John Oh let's have a coffee before we move on?

We travelled down to the West Country
stopping near Bath for a cup of tea,
Then to Shaftesbury to eat some food,
followed by coffee – "aah that was good".

Now we are back in Hamworthy – are own haunt
and its time to plan next year's jaunt, Somerset? North Devon? – we'll have to see
'cos now it's time for a cup of tea!
